

COLOR TV IN COURT TODAY

3 Judges in Chicago to Hear Arguments on C.B.S. Type

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—The Government filed a brief in Federal District Court today stating that the Federal Communications Commission's order of Oct. 10 adopting the Columbia Broadcasting System's television system was a "reasonable policy determination" based on the commission's statutory rule-making authority. The commission's decision followed careful analysis of the technical features of three different methods of color television, the brief said.

This brief, and several affidavits on behalf of Columbia which seeks to intervene as a defendant, will be brought before a three-judge court here tomorrow. The court will hear arguments on a motion of the Radio Corporation of America and two affiliates to suspend the commission's order giving the Columbia Broadcasting System the right to begin color telecasts on Nov. 20.
